

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Tugwell's Mysterious Trip To Europe Excites Washington Speculation

WASHINGTON — Mystery surrounds the New Deal decision to send Rexford Guy Tugwell abroad.

So far as can be ascertained no pressing agricultural problems await the studious mind of Professor Tugwell in Europe. Russia is suffering from a drought—offers no laboratory regarding crop reduction. The Swiss goat milk crop is not likely to be transplanted to the United States. And the question of milking sows—the latest program of the AAA—has not yet taken root in Europe.

Furthermore, Doctor Tugwell is not in need of a vacation. He has just returned from a long junket through the Midwest and from a rest from the Agricultural Department's routine.

One reasonable conjecture for the European trip is that the Administration would like to get Tugwellianism out of the public mind for a while. With the Congressional campaign approaching its climax and the attack on Brain Trust theories becoming more intense, some strategists think it would be excellent to have the No. 1 Brain Trust out of the picture.

Hence the exit.

Monument Cleansing

The Government faces a loss of eight weeks and $11,000 in doing the "face-lifting" job on the Washington Monument.

Nine weeks have passed since the original date set for starting, the first bidder having thrown up the job to a firm whose figure is $11,000 higher.

Cause of the delay is the hazards of erecting a scaffold against the bare face of the marble, foot by foot, to the height of 555 feet. Cost of insuring workmen in this dizzy job proved to be too much for the Architect of the Capitol, who bid of $50,000. Now a Cleveland firm, Alexander Howis, Inc., undertakes to do it for $61,000.

The Government hopes to pass this increase on to the surety company which guaranteed the original low bid.

First construction move was a "tunnel" built above ground to protect the three thousand daily visitors from falling debris.

Cleaning the monument means removing dust or soot, but the red, blue and green discoloration caused by water seeping into crevices, corroding the marble.

To prevent further corrosion the marble blocks will be "pointed," the cracks filled in where the stone has been "spalled" or "stunned."

Walsh Successor

Gerald P. Nye is emerging from the munitions probe as a contender for the mantle worn by the late Tom Walsh as the Senate's premier crusading investigator.

The munitions investigation is the third major congressional scandal-hunt that the 42-year-old North Dakotan has directed in the nine years he has served in the Senate.

Nye was hardly out of the rookie class when, as Chairman of the Senate Public Lands Committee, he led the search into the secret Teapot Dome ramifications of the mysterious Continental Trading Corporation.

A long list of notables, among them "Uncle Andy" Mellon, "Elder" Will Hays, and the oil baron Harry F. Sinclair, experienced squirming and embarrassing moments under the glare of that revelatory inquisition.

Several years later, when the Senate set up a special committee for investigating campaign funds which no one wanted to tackle, Nye dared take the helm.

He came to rue his bravado, for Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick (now Sims) was an Illinois Senatorial aspirant that year. Nye's embarrassing disclosures regarding her expenditures greatly irritated the lady who, being a daughter of Mark Hanna, fought back, hammer and scissor.

Mrs. Sims was defeated. And Nye was glad.

The slender, boyish-looking North Dakotan has come a long way since he first appeared in the Senate direct from the flat-bed (Continued on Page Five.)

RADCLIFF, SUSPENDED, TO DEMAND HEARING

Written Notice By Chief Warner Handed to Him Monday Evening

OBTAINS ATTORNEY

Hearing to be Before Civil Service Trio

That Carl K. Radcliff, Town-st. who was suspended as a night patrolman by Police Chief W. H. Warner effective last Saturday, will appeal for a hearing before the civil service commission was disclosed today by his attorney, Richard Simkins.

In the written notice of suspension handed Radcliff Monday evening by Officer William McCrady, who was under orders of Chief Warner, Radcliff was charged with immoral conduct, neglect of duty and of "taking property not belonging to him."

The officer declared he would fight the case "to the end" in an effort to obtain justification.

FILE IN 10 DAYS

When the appeal for hearing will be filed is not certain but it is certain to be within 10 days, the statutory limit after the date of suspension.

The civil service commission which will hear the appeal in open court is comprised of W. H. Mason, James McLaughlin and Wade H. Cook. It is believed the decision of the commission is final although some believe the officer could appeal to common pleas court if the result is unfavorable to him.

The suspension is the first in the local police department for a number of years.

At the time Radcliff was notified of his suspension, he said, he was also asked to resign. This he refused.

OHIO MURDER PLOT PROBED

Meigs-Co Police Arrest Man After Funeral of Wife; Brother Missing.

POMEROY, Sept. 11.—A bizarre murder plot in which a domestic quarrel was climaxed by two shot-gun slayings—one crime to hide the other—was allegedly uncovered by police here today.

Hayes Will, 58, who was taken into custody after the funeral of his slain wife, Mary, was being held by police without charge in connection with the mystery.

Will, after his wife was killed by a shotgun charge in the abdomen, told police, they said, that a brother of the woman, Jesse O'Brien, had murdered his young mate.

Authorities believed, they declared, that O'Brien was dead and that his body had been hidden in some wooded recess in Meigs-Co.

According to police, Mrs. Will had quarreled with her husband, twice her senior, after she sued him for divorce on grounds of infidelity.

The shooting occurred Saturday but police did not arrest Will until yesterday, after his young wife was buried. They took the action after they failed to trace O'Brien.

Deputy sheriffs have been dispatched in a hunt for O'Brien's body. Will will be held until all mystery surrounding the shooting of his wife has been cleared up, police said. However, no specific charges have been filed against the man.

OHIO SECRETARY TO TALK HERE FRIDAY

Ohio's secretary of state, George S. Myers, will be the principal speaker at an open meeting of the Pickaway-co Democratic Women's club Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Anna Mackley, of Dayton, treasurer of the Ohio Federation of Women's club, will also be present to address the meeting, to be held in the common pleas court room.

The club has extended an invitation to all Democratic men and women to attend.

CROSBY PAYS $100

Willard Crosby, of Walnut-st., who was fined $100 and costs yesterday by Mayor W. B. Cady for driving while intoxicated, was released from the county jail Tuesday after paying his fine.

He was arrested Sunday afternoon after his car had crashed into the Essex machine belonging to Taylor McCrady, Walnut-st., parked in front of the McCrady residence.

Democrats to Hear Rutherford Tonight

An invitation has been extended to all Democrats to attend the meeting of the Pickaway-co Democratic club in the common pleas court room this evening beginning at 8 o'clock.

Rev. W. F. Rutherford, of Columbus, former pastor of the United Brethren church here, will be the principal speaker. It is also expected that another local speaker will be on hand.

After tonight's gathering, meetings will be held semi-monthly instead of weekly.

NRA SPLIT IN 3 DIVISIONS

Johnson To Remain As Administrator, Early Says After Conference.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 11.—An NRA divided cleanly and sharply into three divisions—legislative, judicial and administrative—with General Hugh S. Johnson retaining the title of administrator and heading the administrative division, emerged today as the form of temporary reorganization to be effected by President Roosevelt.

The President and Johnson, conferring here in the executive's comfortable home on the Hudson river, have reached the stage of putting the new setup on paper. Johnson arrived here late yesterday and last night he and the President worked until past midnight at their task. Early this morning they were hard at work again.

Johnson carefully avoided reporters, but direct from the President through his secretary, Stephen T. Early, came word that definite progress was being made. Mr. Roosevelt did not specifically define Johnson's duties under the new setup, but it was reiterated that he would continue in his technical post of administrator. Some time ago Johnson made it plain he did not longer wish to be associated with the policy-forming branch of NRA work.

Johnson will leave here after today's meeting and return to his Bethany Beach, Delaware, cottage within the next few days to whip into final shape the reorganization plan for submission to the President.

Under the new setup, the N. R. A. legislative division will fix the big recovery machine policy.

The judicial division will handle all labor disputes and the work now being done by the various code authorities.

GUNMEN'S FLIGHT FATAL TO QUARTET

ALLIANCE, Sept. 11.—The mad flight of two gunmen in a stolen car today had cost the lives of two 18-year-old girls, on their way to enroll in college, and a young man, brother of one of the girls, in whose automobile they were riding.

The death list in the collision of the two cars was raised to four when one of the two alleged robbers, identified as William Ranger, 28, of Akron, died in city hospital here after the accident in which the three were killed.

The girls and young man all were residents of Louisville, near here. They were Eugenia Nimereala, 18, Jane Quilter, 18, and the latter's brother, Eugene Quilter.

The second of the alleged robbers remained in the hospital here under police guard suffering from injuries received in the crash. He gave his name as Ward Cobdash, also of Akron, according to Police Chief H. L. Stark.

Cobdash will be charged with highway robbery and manslaughter, Chief Stark said today.

Deercreek-Twp Farmer Shoots Hen, Not Thief

Charles Weaver, Deercreek-twp farmer, turned detective Saturday evening but instead of getting his man, an escaping chicken thief, he got one of the chickens.

Chicken thieves have been making successful visits to Weaver's chicken house for some time, so he decided to investigate Saturday evening, he and his family got in their car and apparently started to town. However, "Detective" Weaver stopped the machine down the road and stole up through the corn field back to the farm.

As he neared the chicken yard, he heard cackles emanating from the house and knew at once that the thief had come back. Soon, the culprit, carrying a sack darted out into a corn field and started running along a rail fence.

Bang! went Mr. Weaver's gun, the bullet crashing into the rail fence and ricocheting toward the running thief. Hurrying to the scene, Weaver discovered that the bullet had killed one of three chickens and crippled the wing of another, while the third was still missing.

The thief's tracks trailed through the corn-field, indicated that he had made a hurried exit. The missing third chicken was located near the scene on Sunday morning by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Miller Fissell, who helped investigate.

He was later taken to East Ringgold, where he said he would visit relatives.

Closeness of The Herald's Contest Holds Interest

The prospect of having their subscriptions yield such a great vote value this week, and with the added attraction of the $25 extra cash prize is bringing home to each and every worker in the Salesmanship Club realization of the good things that are to come to them for their aid in boosting The Herald's circulation list.

The workers have every incentive for extreme effort this week, to win the $25 extra cash prize, and the opportunity to have their subscriptions count double votes, and from early reports they are going to take advantage of it. A veritable harvest of votes can be gathered this week, and those persons who wish to help their favorite worker over the winning line should give them their subscriptions this week, before the vote value of subscriptions take another slump.

An unusual feature of the contest so far is the extreme closeness of the race. The first count of votes which was made Monday revealed the fact that the majority of the workers are separated from first place only by a few dollars worth of subscriptions, while several are almost tied for first place.

SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE IN AIR?

By International News Service

"Problems arising out of the textile dispute are not impossible of solution."

Swinging into action behind this optimistic keynote, President Roosevelt's textile strike mediation board today arranged a meeting with leading representatives of the cotton division of the industry while labor and management maintained their lines in the far-flung walkout.

Hope for an early settlement of the strike brightened throughout the industry following the statement of Chairman John G. Winant that the board believes "a settlement can be reached which will be fair to workers, employers and in the public interest."

U.S. INQUIRERS HEAR DETAILS

Engineer Tells 32 In Lifeboat and Only Two of Them Passengers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Chief Engineer Eben S. Abbott, the first witness called today at the federal inquiry into the Morro Castle disaster, testified there were 32 persons in the lifeboat in which he left the ill-starred ship and that only two were passengers.

The chief engineer, dark-complexioned man of about 55, said he was asleep when the fire broke out. He admitted he did not go to the engine room. He said he telephoned three when he heard the alarm and they told him "everything was all right."

He said he did all he could to help passengers. He declared that Acting Captain William F. Warms told him when the flames were raging across the ship's superstructure to "take that boat." He got in lifeboat number one.

Dickerson N. Hoover, chairman of the board of inquiry, asked him who were in the lifeboat when he got in it. The witness replied there were about 32 persons in it. Two of them were passengers—Dr. Cochrane and a person he didn't know.

Ship May Remain Resort Feature

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 11.—The morbid, but undeniably intense interest of the public in the wreck of the Morro Castle on the beach here has been duly noted by the city fathers of Asbury park, who today were seriously considering making the fire-blackened vessel a permanent addition to the resort's amusement attractions.

On Sunday the city charged 25 cents admission to the Convention hall pier from which an excellent view can be obtained and grossed more than $2,800.

The city council has retained Donald Waeche, a Jersey city lawyer to press the claim that the municipality is entitled to claim ownership of the ship on the grounds that ownership is vested in the city as a riparian right.

BUCYRUS CHURCH ISSUES CALL TO ASHVILLE PASTOR

Rev. H. H. Glick, pastor of the Ashville Lutheran church, today had been invited to assume the pulpit of the Good Hope church at Bucyrus, following a meeting of the congregation there.

If Rev. Glick accepts the call, he will succeed Rev. O. A. Bertram, who retired after serving as pastor of the church for 25 years. Dr. Bertram and his family have moved to Florida.

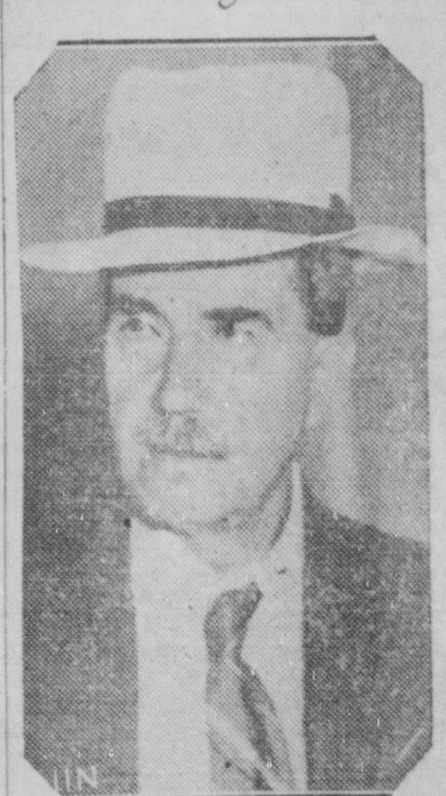

The usual procedure followed in Lutheran churches when a minister receives a call is to allow the congregation of the church where the pastor is stationed to vote on whether or not he should remain or leave the charge. Even after this vote, he has his own choice in the action.

Rev. Glick has been stationed at Ashville during the past several years and is highly respected there.

"NEED SHAKEUP"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The Maine election carries a warning to the Republican party to adopt a more liberal policy if it expects to live, Senator Gerald Nye, (R) of North Dakota, said today.

"I think it is just one more evidence of the need for the Republican party—if it wants to live—to entrench itself with a more liberal background than it has yet been able to conceive," said Nye.

Senator George (D) of Georgia said: "It is an endorsement of the 'New Deal' from a most unexpected quarter."

able margin over his Republican opponent Alfred K. Ames of Machias, retired timberland operator, and his re-election seemed assured.

Although Democratic leaders were reluctant to issue any statements indications were that a Democratic victory for major offices would sweep the state by the time the total vote has been tabulated.

HALE IS FORCED

Senator Frederick Hale, Republican of Portland, who is seeking re-election for a fourth term. Hale's lead was slightly more than 1,000.

An early lead of 3 to 2 was reported for repeal of state constitution. (Continued on Page Six)

WIFE OF MINISTER KILLED IN CRASH

Many friends here were shocked to learn of the tragic death of Mrs. A. L. Brokaw, wife of a former local Methodist Episcopal church minister, last Saturday night 10 miles northwest of Lima. Her death resulted from injuries received in an automobile collision.

The Brokaws were here about 12 years ago.

TIGERS TO TANGLE WITH ACADEMY '11'

Columbus Academy coached by Bill Hunt will be the first opponent of the high school Tigers. The game will be played on Sept. 21 on the local lot. Hunt will bring a team of boys who would be eligible for any high school team to this city. He has a number of others who would be considered "ringers" but will not use them when playing a legitimate high school.

Negotiations were closed with Hunt this morning by Principal E. J. Gephart and Coach Pete Herberholz.

The local squad is rounding into pretty good condition with some boys showing up to splendid advantage. One of those expected to go places is Don Henry, sophomore back, who may make the quarter-back position.

MANY AFTER BERTHS

Others fighting for positions are Coleman, Joe Bell, the Watts brothers, Bob and Red, Freddie Grant, Osborne, Roth, Ned Plum, Mader, Jackson, Pile, Cooper, George Speakman, Wolfe, Steinhauer, Friley, Rankin, Foreman, John Griffith, Merriman, John McGinnis, Adkins, and Jim Lyle. George Davis, a halfback last year, has not yet reported for practice but is expected out before the end of this week.

The squad lacks in weight but there are enough boys who know what it is all about to make things interesting.

This season the C. H. S. football squad has taken out accident insurance offered through the State High School Athletic Association. The benefits are of amounts varying according to the seriousness of the injury sustained and in all save extraordinary cases should cover the expense involved. The premium of $3 per boy per season is to be paid in the following manner: $1 by the boy, and $2 by the school athletic association. At the present most members of the squad have applied for this insurance.

UMPIRE PREVENTS RED BIRD BEATERS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Sept. 11.—A protest was planned today by Wade Killefer, manager of the American Association Indians, against the action of Umpire Dunn who last night called the Tribe's game with the Columbus Red Birds in the last half of the ninth inning just after the Indians had tied the score 3 to 3 and had the bases loaded and none out.

The umpire's action was made amid boos from 5,500 spectators and is believed to have saved the Red Birds from a third defeat in the crucial series for the eastern division championship of the association.

Elliott and Heusser carried on the Birds' hurling, with Bolen and Turner pitching for the Indians.

In event the series is not ended in five games, the attendance figures in the first five tilts will be used as a basis to pick the site for the play-off tilts.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

IF IT wasn't for the automobile the joke business would sure go on the rocks. I estimate that fifty per cent of all the stories and ninety per cent of all the off-color jokes is now told about automobiles or people that have automobiles.

So this one is about a young guy that was taking his girl to a dance one night and the tire came off a rear wheel. This bird had an awful time getting the thing back on, and the girl was a little bored, sitting in the car all by herself. Well, he wouldn't let well enough alone, but goes and makes conversation like this:

"Some hard luck! And I remember that the last time I went out with you I had a flat tire."

"Whoops!" she says, "that's nothing. I've had a flat the every time I've been out with you, so I guess we're about even on that."

Well, it's hard to get ahead of these girls that we have nowadays. (American News Features, Inc.)

N. Y. GIANTS FACE STRUGGLE TO RETAIN LEAD IN LEAGUE

Commit Six Errors, Three In Ninth, To Hand Game To Pirates as St. Louis Cuts Lead; Tigers Gain Half Game With Yankees Idle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—For a while this summer New Yorkers thought they would surely see the Giants and Yankees battling in the World Series next month.

They became resigned to seeing only half a series when Mackey Cochran's rampant Tigers put the chill on the Yankees. And now they are wondering if they are going to see any part of the fall classic.

The latest doubt is occasioned by the terrific slump of the Giants who have blown their last three while the Cardinals have run their winning string to five straight, leaving the Giants with only a four game lead over the St. Louis entry today.

HITTING RETURNS

For two weeks the Giants were in the throes of a hitting slump but they snapped out of that yesterday only to have their fielding go haywire.

Dizzy fielding rather than Hal Schumacher's poor pitching was the cause of their 9 to 7 defeat by the Pirates. The Giants made six errors and all of them were costly.

Going into the ninth Schumacher apparently had his 22nd victory well in hand but three hits plus three errors settled him and the Giants at the same time.

Six errors in one game would be something of a record even for the Dodgers. For the Giants it is unheard of. If it was just one of those days, the Giants, with a four game lead to work on, have nothing to worry about. But if the errors were caused by a sudden tightening up, it might indicate that the Giants are on the skids.

However, the Giants have too much class in the pitcher's box to run into any extended losing streak and should be able to snap out of it before the Cards arrive late in the week for the series that probably will settle the pennant race.

While the Giants were wobbling all over the Polo grounds, the Tigers were picking up half a game at the expense of the idle Yanks by taking the Red Sox 2-1 on two homers by Greenberg.

Eldon Auker held the Sox to three hits while the Tigers made five off Dusty Rhodes. Greenberg's first homer tied the score in the seventh and his second won the game in the ninth. The second one—a wallop over the center field fence—was one of the longest drives ever made in Detroit and probably second only to the one Babe Ruth hit over that same fence in 1927.

Dizzy Dean hung up his 25th victory by holding the Phillies to five hits to win 4-1. Dizzy and his brother probably will make good the former's early season boast that between them they would win 45 games for the Cards. To date they have won 40—exactly half of the Cards' total victories—and should easily gather in five more.

Cliff Bolton gave the Senators 7-4 decision over the White Sox; the A's topped the Indians 9-6 and the Dodgers won 18 men in dropping one to the Reds 6-5, in the only other game of the day.

AMERICAN NAMED LABATT KIDNAPER

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 11.—Albert Pergam, alias Leon, alias Jack Snead, an American desperado, was identified today as one of the "snatch" gang which kidnapped John S. Labatt, wealthy London, Ont., brewer, and held him for three days.

Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck announced this morning that Pergam has been named by seven witnesses as the driver of the kidnappers' car.

$60,000 For Grave

DAVENPORT, Ia.—Such was her dread that after she died her body might be removed from the grave she had selected beside that of her husband, that Mrs. Eva Gardner made a will establishing a $60,000 trust fund to combat any moves to separate the two corpses. Friends of the dead woman say they know of no reason why Mrs. Gardner should have feared any such separation.

Police Chief Scores Reckless Motorists

Public enemy No. 1 is the reckless motorist!

So declared Chief of Police Charles M. Finn of Chelsea, Mass., in a statement issued to the Massachusetts governor's committee on street and highway safety.

Chief Finn said: "This public enemy No. 1 the reckless, irresponsible automobile driver, of whom there are thousands at large, has three killings on his record to every one by professional and amateur murderers put together."

"He maims more victims than all the gunmen in the United States and the loss of property which he causes makes the loot of all our bank robbers look like the day's work of a subway pick-pocket."

Any modern girl can learn to cook and keep house if she has a good foundation in electrical engineering.

Here is the Archduke Allbrecht who is reported to be planning to divorce his morganatic wife, the former Irene Lebach, thus making himself a potential pretender to the Austrian throne. ## CARD CLUB MEETS WITH MRS. COATE

Members of Mrs. Lester Coate's Monday night card club enjoyed an interesting contract bridge game at her home on W. Union-st., last evening.

Three tables were in play and high score awards went to Mrs. Glen Geib and Mrs. E. I. Gephart.

Monday Club Year Begins; Review Given

The Monday club convened at 7:30 p. m. Monday evening in its first session for the year, with Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer, the president for 1933-34, presiding. After disposing of the old business of the year, which included the voting in of Mrs. E. S. Thacher as an active member of the club, Miss Reichelderfer thanked the club members and the executive board for their loyal support during the past year and then presented the gavel to Mrs. Hildegard Jones, the new president.

Mrs. Jones in a brief and pleasant manner outlined her platform for the coming year. The following press committees were then appointed by the president:

The drama division, Miss Emily Yates and Mrs. Paul Johnson; world government, Mrs. R. R. Bales and Miss Mary Foresman; music, Miss Ann Bennett and Mrs. Walter Kindler; psychology, Mrs. William Ulm and Mrs. B. R. Bales.

Tellers appointed for the year were Miss Martha Mader, Miss Margaret Dunlap and Miss Jane Mader.

The chairman of the psychology division, Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, was in charge of the evening's program, which consisted of a psychological test in reading given by Miss Florence Hoffman and Mrs. Lawrence Johnson.

This was followed by a very interesting paper by Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer on "Psychology of the New Education." She gave a brief review of the book by this name which is the work of Prof. S. L. Pressey, professor of psychology at Ohio State university.

Miss Reichelderfer's review in part follows:

"The material in this book is the product of a ten-year program of experimentation in educational problems, with the aim—not to give cold knowledge and facts about children but a warm, sympathetic understanding of teachers and pupils and the things they try to do together—to problems of human welfare and happiness of public school pupils.

"The writer is a very firm believer in the effects of environment. He does not question the importance of original nature but he believes that the rights of every child are: effective growth and development in character, personality, usefulness, health, happiness and intellectual efficiency in so far as he is capable of growth along these several traits. These factors are the product of forces which can be controlled and the chief agency for such control must be education. To an extent not dreamed of ten years ago society is responsible for what each child becomes; and the school

Doris Takes $2 Ride

Doris Duke

With enough money to buy a whole fleet of busses and then some, Doris Duke, reputedly the richest girl in the world, nevertheless isn't opposed to paying $2 for a ride on one of the vehicles. A bit camera shy, Doris is shown upon her arrival in Boston after a bus ride from Portland, Me. She boarded the bus when her plane was forced down near the Maine city.

can make a child or break him—bring him happiness or utter misery—always keeping in mind that a reasonably satisfactory adjustment to the world is possible for individuals of almost any level of intelligence and the author asserts that delinquents, criminals and lunatics are made, not born.

"A more scientific attitude—one of experimentation and research should be applied to the educational program of a thoroughly industrialized, twentieth century democracy."

He believes in the future we must give more time to physical growth, prevention of diseases and to social development of the child. The new education sponsors work built on children's interests, interests which lead to activities. Activities which lead to education that will develop normal, well-balanced individuals who will fit into our complex civilization and become worthy citizens of our country.

Speed Crazy

SHOCKED by the fact that the American people seem not to have been shocked the shocking knowledge that 30,000 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents last year, one of the life insurance companies wonders if the public might not be shocked into doing something about it if it were aware of the shocking causes of most fatal accidents.

It seems, according to official data, that three-fourths of all motor mishaps result from someone driving faster than conditions warrant and that the causes of the other 25 per cent of accidents are failure to slow down at intersections, failure to keep to the right, failure to slow down for pedestrians, parking dangerously, passing preceding vehicles on the right, failure to heed traffic control devices and passing other vehicles where the vision is obscured.

Were these facts news to the driving public it would be well to direct the attention of each driver to them, but there is not an operator of a motor vehicle who is not cognizant of all these facts and most operators ignore them. The average driver finds it less effort to take a chance than to be careful, and the typical pedestrian has too much on his mind to look or wait before he jumps into the stream of traffic.

Another phase of this dire situation usually ignored is the mutilation of hundreds of thousands of Americans each year in motor accidents. Americans who shudder at the scarred faces of European duellists do nothing to prevent mass disfigurement of men, women and children in automobile accidents. There are days when a visitor from another planet if placed upon a busy thoroughfare would think this a battle-scarred race.

A "blind date" might as well be like that. He hasn't got a look-in, anyway.

But Can They Laugh?

NOT much good fun and humor have come out of Soviet Russia since the bolsheviks revolutionized the nation and thereupon dedicated their lives to revolutionizing the world. The Red Russians have been a pretty dour lot and their literature and drama have been made of the same sober stuff.

One revolution deserves another, so Russia under Stalin undertakes a revolution of good humor and jubilation. The government has decided that Russian literature must be livened with rich humor as counter irritant to the deadly seriousness of propaganda and doctrinaire discursing. There is a reason for this trend toward levity after so much solemnity. The dictatorship in Moscow has discovered that human beings can be serious only so long and that after the limit has been reached not even the firing squad can wipe the smile from a peasant's or worker's face and force back a good deep-throated laugh. Hilarity, like murder, will out.

The American Puritans were long under the delusion that they could forever abolish laughter. When the pendulum began to swing in the other direction it went the whole way. Man cannot gainsay human nature, and it is part of human nature to laugh on occasion.

This will be a pleasanter world in which to live when the Russian politicians cease taking themselves so seriously.

It isn't poverty that develops strong characters. It is the determination to get out of it.

Strange people! We long for easy times, yet argue that adversity made our fathers finer men.

For that matter, the little emperor of Manchukuo could impress his neighbors by defying the great Powers.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Wilson's tone was still a trifle formal and precise, perhaps, but the mountain woman did not mistake the kindly spirit of his answer. "I shall be most happy to serve you, madam," he hesitated, then added, with earnest meaning, "in any way I can."

Ann Haskel smiled her gratitude. "I war plum' sure you would," she said. "You war kind of a man, 'Gordon,' she added, still smiling. "If I'd 'a' found you war'n't I'd jest natchally have to git me somebody else to do the buttlin' 'round here."

At this Wilson himself ventured a smile. "Quite right, madam, quite right. But if I may be so bold, I can't imagine anyone not wishing to—ah—serve you. Please command me with full confidence. I shall understand."

"Wal," returned Ann, "I reckon I may'st well start by tellin' you right out plain, 'cause you're bound to find hit out anyway, that I war'n't no ways born to such as this. I grewed up without no schoolin' ner nothin'. I'm gest an ignorant old backwoods woman what's been a-livin' an' a-workin' in the ashes an' dirt all her life. But here of late I got me a chance, mebbe, at somethin' different—somethin' like I've allus dreamed I could be—'cause even if I be ignorant, 'I say, I sure ain't never been low-down trash like some I know'."

Wilson's professional pose became a little less pronounced. He was listening with a degree of human interest not usually credited to the perfect butler. "As you can see," Ann continued, "my son he ain't been raised like his maw. I've give him education an' fixed his son's war raised right, an' now I'm aimin' fer him to have the sort of things an' live like a man of his schoolin' ought. I mean the sort of things an' the sort of livin' what jest natchally goes with a house like this here. It's easy to understand how I can't no ways do this fer my Herb without makin' myself into the kind of a mother sich a man would natchally have. I want to be like the folks what lived here with all these books an' pitchers an' art things."

The butler's face beamed. "I can assure you, madam, there are no other people anywhere in the world than the—than this family—which I have served here in this house for the past forty years."

"I know good an' well that's the truth, Wilson. I don't know so mighty much 'bout some things but I've sure found out that quality money what makes folks quality. 'Tis a bunch of folks what comes very summer to live near my place in the backwoods an' they got seeds of money, but, shucks! I'm a-tellin' you they ain't no better'n some of the lowest-down hill-billies—jest a count 'em—'triffin'—do-nothin'-but—'a-cain't trash, that's what they are. They live in this here year city, too, when they're to home. That's the main reason I come here an' nent this place. I sure aim to show 'em."

"I am confident that you will, madam."

"Yes sir, I've sure 'larned that folks can have money an' education an' the right raisin' an' be real quality, 'long with hit all. An' folks can have money an' schoolin' an' everything an' be jest plain down-right bone-worthless an' ornery. Hit ain't the money what does hit. Hit's somethin' inside. I ain't aimin' to be no different inside than I've allus been. I've allus knowed how I ought to act when I didn't have nothin'. Now I want to 'larn how to act when I got money 'nough to buy anything I want. I ain't no a-wantin' to be no different inside."

"Certainly not, madam. Very good indeed. Exactly—"

"You're a workin' man, Wilson, but you know all 'bout sich things. I mean, you know all the things 'bout 'larnin'. I can see you're real quality yourself, too. 'Tis a workin' woman all my borned days an' I don't know nothin' else. So I'm askin' you to 'larn me how to act fitten to my boy with his education an' raisin'. That's what I'm a-wantin' of you—'if hit ain't too much of a jore generous portion of Wilson's professional formality disappeared."

A still more generous portion of Wilson's professional formality disappeared.

Killed 400 Starlings

TOLEDO—Eric S. Howard and five companions shot between 300 and 400 starlings with only a few volleys here recently. Howard, a state deputy game warden and his assistants went on their hunting spree after residents in the neighborhood complained that nearly 3,000 European starlings had formed the habit of roosting in the trees about their homes and were a nuisance.

To Prepare
Infant's
FoodDr. Copeland Advises
Young Mothers On Feeding the Baby

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

ALTHOUGH THE ideal food for every baby is breast milk, it sometimes becomes necessary to wean the infant early and place it on a formula. This experience is dreaded by the young mother. Yet when bottle feeding is properly supervised and certain rules followed, the child is assured of the nourishment essential to proper growth and development.

All the utensils used in the preparation of the baby's food should be kept clean. The milk supply for the day should be prepared in the morning, immediately after the milk has been delivered.

A good plan is to keep the bottles filled with water until they are needed for cleansing. A brush should be used for the bottle should be thoroughly boiled and carefully rinsed in hot water before adding milk.

After filling, a cotton or special rubber stopper should cover the neck of the bottle. Place the bottle on the ice immediately and keep it there until it is time to warm it for the baby's meal.

The rubber nipple should be turned inside out and thoroughly scrubbed with a brush. The nipples as well as the bottles must be sterilized before being used again. When the bottle is empty, take off the nipple and wash it carefully with warm water. Place it in a cup of boric acid solution where it may be kept until needed again.

Special formulas and diets must be recommended by the attending physician. Bear in mind that babies vary in their requirements and that the mixture that may be good for one infant, for another may prove difficult to digest.

When feeding the baby make sure to hold it in a comfortable position. The head should be well supported, with the bottle slightly tilted. This permits the milk to run out easily and prevents air from mixing with it. When air is swallowed the baby complains of colic.

After the Feeding

A piece of cloth wrapped around the bottle will keep the milk warm longer. This is especially important if your baby is slow in drinking the milk. Usually it should take from fifteen to twenty minutes to finish a bottle. If it takes longer it is probable that the hole in the nipple is too small. This can be corrected by enlarging the hole with a sterile needle. The baby may finish the feeding in too short a time and, in that event, the hole in the nipple may be too large.

After the baby has finished the feeding, hold it upright with the head over your shoulder. Pat the child gently on the back until it belches. This will relieve it of any air that may have been swallowed and will prevent colic and vomiting.

Never force an infant to take the bottle. Encourage it, but if it continues to refuse it may be due to a rich mixture or to some other fault in the preparation. Consult with your physician or go to the local health station in regard to a change in the formula.

PATTERN 9826

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. But look again— isn't that double yoke attractive ending in two demure little scallops that button down in the front? And the side pleats which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Pattern 9826 may be ordered only in sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

AT THE GRAND

One of the most unusual screen attractions of the year, packed with romance, intrigue and suspense, will be seen at the Grand Theatre, with the announcement by Manager Baughman, that he has secured the booking of Universal's super dramatic film production, "Madame Spy," with Fay Wray and Nils Asther featured.

One of the most colorful and enthralling pictures that have been seen in a long time, "Madame Spy" will thrill and amaze its audiences with its daring expose of what went on behind the scenes of the last War, and how a beautiful woman used her charms to love and betray. Advance reports on the picture describe it as a powerfully moving adventure through the gay capitals of Europe while the devastating sword of storm and strife was hanging over them. An imposing array of screen names fortifies the cast of "Madame Spy," in support of Miss Wray and Asther, including such sterling players as Noah Beery, John Miljan, Edward Arnold, David Torrence, Rolo Lloyd and Vince Barnett.

AT THE CLIFTONA

A clue to the reason why so many actresses seek divorces from an actor husband is contained in the Paramount film, "The Great Flirtation," coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Cliftona

Theatre, with Elissa Landi and Adolphe Menjou in the principal roles.

In this story of the romance of an exotic actress and a temperamental actor, which was written by Gregory Ratoff, Adolphe Menjou, as the husband, gives Elissa Landi, his wife, a great deal more advice than love. Because she cannot find romance in her husband, she turns to other men. And so these two must lose love to learn that they ever possessed it in the surprise climax that closes the film.

"The Great Flirtation" was produced by Charles R. Rogers and directed by Ralph Murphy. David Manners and Lynne Overman are featured with Miss Landi and Menjou.

Capt. Willmott's Body Found Burned in Cabin

No Autopsy Possible Since Fire Chief Says Remains Would Not "Fill Two Shoe Boxes;" Keys Found in Room Identify Remains.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 11.—Apparently there will be no autopsy performed on the body of Captain Robert D. Willmott of the ill-starred liner Morro Castle, it was said here today.

The body of the captain, who died of a heart attack a few hours before the ship was swept by flames, was found in his cabin aboard the liner late last night. The remains were so badly burned that no autopsy of consequence could be made, it was said, and the body was left where it was found.

KEYS IDENTIFIED

The discovery was made by Fire Chief William Taggart of Asbury Park and identification was made by means of a bunch of keys bearing a ring inscribed "Captain."

"What was left would only fill a couple of shoe boxes," Chief Taggart said in describing the find. Earlier in the day officials of the Ward line, owners of the vessel, had ventured into the master's quarters, but had failed to find any trace of Captain Willmott's body.

A more complete search of the cabin was made possible when firemen sprayed the red-hot steel frame-work of the ship to cool it. Pouring streams from eight fire hoses the firemen cooled the bridge, Chief Taggart said, adding:

"Finally the men were able to open up a narrow passage leading aft from the bridge to a cabin. The first clue I had that we were really in the captain's quarters was a bunch of keys which bore a tag inscribed "Captain."

"I found the legs of a metal bed had melted. The body had slipped to the floor, the face upturned. The skull was badly burned. Bones remained of the legs and arms."

WOULD HAVE ESCAPED

"It was the skipper, all right. Anyone who was alive in this cabin would have had plenty of time to get out, for it was about the last place reached by the flames above the hold."

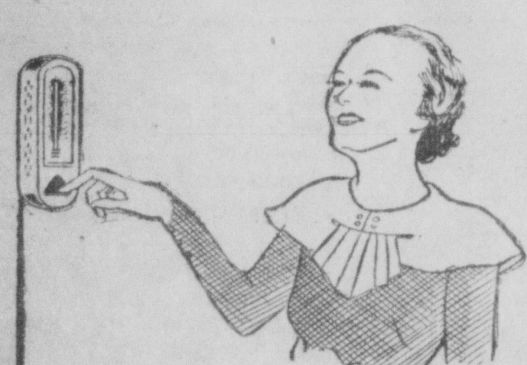

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—A separate investigation by insurance men was under way today in the Morro Castle disaster.

Agents of the American Marine Insurance syndicate, representing 40 underwriters who carried about $2,500,000 insurance on the hull, were assigned to follow the various probes of the tragedy as well as to institute one of their own. Besides the syndicate insurance, the ship is said to have carried $1,000,000 in policies from Lloyd's. It was not certain today just how much insurance was carried on the cargo, which amounted to 950 tons, chiefly of hides, liquor and fruit. The cargo was described as a "light load."

stitutional prohibition. As subsequent returns trickled in, this advantage was maintained.

Gov. Brann was confident that he would be re-elected and predicted that several of the larger cities, including his home town of Lewistown, would go Democratic by big majorities.

Republican leaders conceded the election of Governor Brann.

CITIES FOR BRANN

Brann and Ames ran neck and neck in most of the rural sections, but most of the urban centers appeared to be favoring the incumbent.

In Biddeford, Gov. Brann polled a majority of nearly 5,000 while Dubord received a majority of 4,300 in the same city. Simon H. Hamlin of South Portland, Democratic candidate for congressman from the first district, polled a majority of 4,000 over Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Portland.

Incomplete returns from scattered sections this morning gave Brann 163,968 votes to 130,180 for Ames in the gubernatorial contest.

Former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Dexter, Republican, was believed to have the edge in the fight for the congressional seat from the second district now occupied by John G. Utterback, of Bangor, a Democratic, who defeated him two years ago.

A victory for Congressman Edward C. Moran of Rockland over Judge Zelma M. Swinal of Camden, Republican, was predicted by non-partisan observers.

BY JAMES A. FARLEY

Chairman, Democratic National Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—"As Maine goes, so goes the nation." "I am content with the result of the election yesterday. The Democratic national organization during this campaign was satisfied to leave the decision to the intelligence and loyalty of the voters of Maine. For that reason, no concerted effort was planned or carried out in the nature of a campaign, while the Republican national organization centered the fire there of its heaviest political artillery, all aimed at the Roosevelt administration policies. The heavy artillery, however, turned out to be pop guns—Colonel Knox, Col. Teddy Roosevelt, Senator Dickinson, Senator Hastings, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee and Congressman Bolton, chairman of the Republican congressional committee.

The convincing majority given to Governor Louis Brann, which should be ten times the plurality he registered in 1932, should be ample that the New Deal meets with the approval of the majority of the people of this country.

The umpire's action was made amid boos from 5,500 spectators and is believed to have saved the Red Birds from a third defeat in the crucial series for the eastern division championship of the association.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

IF IT wasn't for the automobile the joke business would sure go on the rocks. I estimate that fifty per cent of all the stories and ninety per cent of all the off-color jokes are now told about automobiles or people that have automobiles. So this one is about a young guy that was taking his girl to a dance one night and the tire came off a rear wheel. This bird had an awful time getting the thing back on, and the girl was a little bored, sitting in the car all by herself. Well, he wouldn't let well enough alone, but goes and makes conversation like this:

"Some hard luck! And I remember that the last time I went out with you I had a flat tire." "Whoops!" she says, "that's nothing, I've had a flat tire every time I've been out with you, so I guess we're about even on that." Well, it's hard to get ahead of these girls that we have nowadays. # N. Y. GIANTS FACE STRUGGLE TO RETAIN LEAD IN LEAGUE

Commit Six Errors, Three In Ninth, To Hand Game To Pirates as St. Louis Cuts Lead; Tigers Gain Half Game With Yankees Idle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—For a while this summer New Yorkers thought they would surely see the Giants and Yankees battling in the World Series next month.

They became resigned to seeing only a series when Mickey Cochrane's rampant Tigers put the chill on the Yankees. And now they are wondering if they are going to see any part of the fall classic.

The latest doubt is occasioned by the terrific slump of the Giants who have blown their last three while the Cardinals have run their winning string to five straight, leaving the Giants with only a four game lead over the St. Louis entry today.

For two weeks the Giants were in the throes of a hitting slump but they snapped out of that yesterday only to have their fielding go haywire.

Dizzy fielding rather than Hal Schumacher's poor pitching was the cause of their 9 to 7 defeat by the Pirates. The Giants made six errors and all of them were costly.

Going into the ninth Schumacher apparently had his 22nd victory well in hand but three hits plus three errors settled him and the Giants at the same time.

Six errors in one game would be something of a record even for the Dodgers. For the Giants it is unheard of. If it was just one of those days, the Giants, with a four game lead to work on, have nothing to worry about. But if the errors were caused by a sudden tightening up, it might indicate that the Giants are on the skids.

However, the Giants have too much class in the pitcher's box to run into any extended losing streak and should be able to snap out of it before the Cards arrive late in the week for the series that probably will settle the pennant race.

While the Giants were wobbling all over the Polo grounds, the Tigers were picking up half a game at the expense of the idle Yanks by taking the Red Sox 2-1 on two homers by Greenberg.

Eldon Auker held the Sox to three hits while the Tigers made five off Dusty Rhine's score in the seventh and his second won the game in the ninth. The second one—a wallop over the center field fence—was one of the longest drives ever made in Detroit and probably second only to the one Babe Ruth hit over that same fence in 1927.

Dizzy Dean hung up his 25th victory by holding the Phillies to five hits to win 4-1. Dizzy and his brother probably will make good the former's early season boast that between them they would win 45 games for the Cards. To date they have won 40—exactly half of the Cards' total victories—and should easily gather in five more.

Cliff Bolton's homer with the bases loaded gave the Senators 7-4 decision over the White Sox; the A's topped the Indians 9-6 and the Dodgers used 18 men in dropping one to the Reds 6-5, in the only other game of the day.

Police Chief Scores Reckless Motorists

Public enemy No. 1 is the reckless motorist! So declared Chief of Police Charles M. Finn of Chelsea, Mass., in a statement issued to the Massachusetts governor's committee on street and highway safety.

Chief Finn said: "This public enemy No. 1, the reckless, irresponsible automobile driver, of whom there are thousands at large, has three killings on his record to every one by professional and amateur murderers put together."

"He maims more victims than all the gunmen in the United States and the loss of property which he causes makes the loot of all our bank robbers look like the day's work of a subway pickpocket."

Any modern girl can learn to cook and keep house if she has a good foundation in electrical engineering.

A bit camera shy, Doris is shown upon her arrival in Boston after a bus ride from Portland, Me. She boarded the bus when her plane was forced down near the Maine city.

Speed Crazy

SHOCKED by the fact that the American people seem not to have been shocked by the shocking knowledge that 30,000 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents last year, one of the life insurance companies wonders if the public might not be shocked into doing something about it if it were aware of the shocking causes of most fatal accidents.

It seems, according to official data, that three-fourths of all motor mishaps result from some one driving faster than conditions warrant and that the causes of the other 25 per cent of accidents are: failure to slow down at intersections, failure to keep to the right, failure to slow down for pedestrians, parking dangerously, passing preceding vehicles on the right, failure to heed traffic control devices and passing other vehicles where the vision is obscured.

Were these facts news to the driving public it would be well to direct the attention of each driver to them, but there is not an operator of a motor vehicle who is not cognizant of all these facts and most operators ignore them. The average driver finds it less effort to take a chance than to be careful, and the typical pedestrian has the same attitude. He waits for a car to hit him before he jumps into the stream of traffic.

Another phase of this dire situation usually ignored is the mutilation of hundreds of thousands of Americans each year in motor accidents. Americans who shudder at the scarred faces of European duellists do nothing to prevent such disfigurement of men, women and children in automobile accidents. There are days when a visitor from another planet if placed upon a busy thoroughfare would think this a battle-scarred race.

A "blind date" might as well be like that. He hasn't got a look-in, anyway.

But Can They Laugh?

NOT much good fun and humor have come out of Soviet Russia since the bolsheviks revolutionized the nation and thereupon dedicated their lives to revolutionizing the world. The Red Russians have been a pretty droll lot and their literature and drama have been made of the same sober stuff.

One revolution deserves another, so Russia under Stalin undertakes a revolution of good humor and jubilation. The government has decided that Russian literature must be livened with rich humor as counter irritant to the deadly seriousness of propaganda and doctrinaire discourses. There is a reason for this trend toward levity after so much solemnity. The dictatorship in Moscow has discovered that human beings can be serious only so long and that after the limit has been reached not even the firing squad can wipe the smile from a peasant's or worker's face and force back a good deep-throated laugh. Hilarity, American style, will out.

The long under the delusion that they could forever abolish laughter. When the pendulum began to swing in the other direction it went the whole way. Man cannot gainsay human nature, and it is part of human nature to laugh on occasion. This will be a pleasanter world in which to live when the Russian politicians cease taking themselves so seriously.

It isn't poverty that develops strong characters. It is the determination to get out of it.

Strange people! We long for easy times, yet argue that adversity made our fathers finer men.

For that matter, the little emperor of Manchukuo could impress his neighbors by defying the great Powers.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Wilson's tone was still a trifle formal and precise, perhaps, but the mountain woman did not mistake the kindly spirit of his answer. "I shall be most happy to serve you, madam," he hesitated, then added, with earnest meaning, "in any way I can."

Ann Haskel smiled her gratitude. "I war plum sure you would. I loved you war that kind of a man. 'Course," she added, still smiling, "if I'd a found you war't I'd jest natchally have to git me somebody else to do the butlin' 'round here."

At his Wilson himself ventured a smile. "Quite right, madam, quite right. But if I may be so bold, I can't imagine anyone not wishing to—ah—serve you. Please command me with full confidence. I shall understand."

"Wal," returned Ann, "I reckon I may'st well start by tellin' you right out plain, 'cause you're bound to find hit out anyway, that I war't noways born to such as this. I grewed up without no schoolin' ner nothin'."

"As you can see," Ann continued, "my son he ain't been raised like his maw. I've give him education an' fixed hit so's he war raised right, an' now I'm aimin' for him to have the sort of things an' live like a man of his schoolin' ought. I mean the sort of things an' the sort of livin' what jest natchally goes with a house like this hear."

Wilson's professional pose became a little less pronounced. He was listening with a degree of human interest not usually credited to the perfect butler.

"You can see," Ann continued, "my son he ain't been raised like his maw. I've give him education an' fixed hit so's he war raised right, an' now I'm aimin' for him to have the sort of things an' live like a man of his schoolin' ought. I mean the sort of things an' the sort of livin' what jest natchally goes with a house like this hear."

The butler's face beamed. "I can assure you, madam, there are no other people anywhere in the world than the—than this family—which I have served here in this house for the past forty years."

"I know good an' well that's the truth, Wilson. I don't know so mighty much 'bout some things but I've sure found out that 'taint money what makes folks happy. 'Taint a bunch of folks what comes every summer to live near my place in the backwoods an' they got scared of money, but, shucks! I'm a tellin' you they ain't no better'n some of the lowest-down hill-billies—jest 'count 'taint 'em, do what they want, but that's what they want. They live in this hear city, too, when they're to home. That's the main reason I come hear an' sent this place. I sure aim to show 'em."

"I am confident that you will, madam."

"Yes sir, I've sure 'larned that folks can have money an' education an' the right raisin' an' be real quality, long with hit all. An' folks can have money an' schoolin' an' everything an' be jest plain down-right, bone-worthless, an' ornery. Hit ain't the money what makes hit's somethin' inside, I ain't aimin' to be no different inside than I've allus been. I've allus knowed how I ought to act when I didn't have nothin'. Now I want to 'larn how to act when I got money 'bout to buy anything. I want, 'taint that I'm a wantin' to be no different inside."

"Certainly not, madam. Very good indeed. Exactly."

"You're a workin' man, Wilson. You know all 'bout sich things. I mean you know all the things I got to 'larn. I can see you're real quality yourself, too. I been a workin' woman all my borned days an' I don't know nothin' else. So I'm askin' you to 'larn me how to act fitten to my boy with his education an' raisin'. That's what I'm a wantin' of you—if hit ain't too much of a job."

A still more generous portion of Wilson's professional formality disappeared.

"You are exactly right, Mrs. Haskel. What you call 'quality'—and it is a very good word—is not at all a question of money. A man may be in rags, so to speak, and still, if he be a gentleman, his quality will show. A woman may wear gowns from Paris and deck herself out with a fortune in jewels and still be quite common."

"I sure admire plain talk, Wilson. I deal in hit myself an' I allus like fer hit to be used by whosoever's a talkin' to me."

The last trace of the butler vanished. Wilson was, by his own understanding of the terms, a gentleman. Nor was the backwoods lady slow to see that she had most effectively broken the ice.

"What was the name of the folks you've been workin' for all these years hear in this house, Wilson? I don't recollect 'taint hearin' Mr. Belden say."

"Wal," returned Ann, "I reckon I may'st well start by tellin' you right out plain, 'cause you're bound to find hit out anyway, that I war't noways born to such as this. I grewed up without no schoolin' ner nothin'."

"I am confident that you will, madam."

"Yes sir, I've sure 'larned that folks can have money an' education an' the right raisin' an' be real quality, long with hit all. An' folks can have money an' schoolin' an' everything an' be jest plain down-right, bone-worthless, an' ornery. Hit ain't the money what makes hit's somethin' inside, I ain't aimin' to be no different inside than I've allus been. I've allus knowed how I ought to act when I didn't have nothin'. Now I want to 'larn how to act when I got money 'bout to buy anything. I want, 'taint that I'm a wantin' to be no different inside."

"Certainly not, madam. Very good indeed. Exactly."

"You're a workin' man, Wilson. You know all 'bout sich things. I mean you know all the things I got to 'larn. I can see you're real quality yourself, too. I been a workin' woman all my borned days an' I don't know nothin' else. So I'm askin' you to 'larn me how to act fitten to my boy with his education an' raisin'. That's what I'm a wantin' of you—if hit ain't too much of a job."

A still more generous portion of Wilson's professional formality disappeared.

To Prepare Infant's Food

Dr. Copeland Advises Young Mothers On Feeding the Baby

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
 United States senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health,
 New York City

ALTHOUGH the ideal food for every baby is breast milk, it sometimes becomes necessary to wean the infant early and place it on a formula. This experience is dreaded by the young mother. Yet when bottle feeding is properly supervised and certain rules followed, the child is assured of the nourishment essential to proper growth and development.

All the details used in the preparation of the baby's food should be kept clean. The milk supply for the day should be prepared in the morning, immediately after the milk has been delivered.

A good plan is to keep the bottles filled with water until they are needed. A bottle brush should be used for cleansing. I need not tell you the bottle should be thoroughly boiled and carefully rinsed in hot water before adding milk.

After filling, a cotton or special rubber stopper should cover the neck of the bottle. Place the bottle on the ice immediately and keep it there until it is time to warm it for the baby's meal.

The rubber nipple should be turned inside out and thoroughly scrubbed with a brush. The nipples as well as the bottles must be sterilized before being used again. When the bottle is empty, take off the nipple and wash it carefully with warm water. Place it in a cup of boracic acid solution where it may be kept until needed again.

Special formulas and diets must be recommended by the attending physician. Bear in mind that babies vary in their requirements and the mixture that may be good for one infant, for another may prove difficult to digest.

When feeding the baby make sure to hold it in a comfortable position. The head should be well supported with the bottle slightly tilted. This permits the milk to run out easily and prevents air from mixing with it. When air is swallowed the baby complains of colic.

After the Feeding

A piece of cloth wrapped around the bottle will keep the milk warm longer. This is especially important if your baby is slow in drinking the milk. Usually it should take from fifteen to twenty minutes to finish a bottle. If it takes longer it is probable that the hole in the nipple is too small. This can be corrected by enlarging the hole with a sterile needle. The baby may think the feeding is too short a time and, in that event, the hole in the nipple may be too large.

After the baby has finished the feeding, hold it upright with the head over your shoulder. Pat the child gently on the back until it belches. This will relieve it of any air that may have been swallowed and will prevent colic and vomiting.

Never force an infant to take the bottle. Encourage it, but if it continues to refuse it may be due to a too rich mixture or to some other fault in the preparation. Consult with your physician or go to the local health station in regard to a change in the formula.

A clue to the reason why so many actresses seek divorces from an actor husband is contained in the Paramount film, "The Great Flirtation," coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Cliftona

Theatre, with Elissa Landi and Adolphe Menjou in the principal roles.

In this story of the romance of an exotic actress and a temperamental actor, which was written by Gregory Ratoff, Adolphe Menjou, as the husband, gives Elissa Landi, his wife, a great deal more advice than love. Because she cannot find romance in her husband, she turns to other men. And so these two must lose love to roles.

"The Great Flirtation" was produced by Charles R. Rogers and directed by Ralph Murphy. David Manners and Lynne Overman are featured with Miss Landi and Menjou.

One of the most unusual screen attractions of the year, packed with romance, intrigue and suspense, will be seen at the Grand Theatre, with the announcement by Manager Baughman, that he has secured the booking of Universal's super dramatic film production, "Madame Spy," with Fay Wray and Nils Asther featured.

One of the most colorful and enthralling pictures that have been seen in a long time, "Madame Spy" will thrill and amaze its audiences with its daring expose of what went on behind the scenes of the last War, and how a beautiful woman used her charms to love and betray. Advance reports on the picture describe it as a powerfully moving adventure through the gay capitals of Europe while the devastating sword of storm and strife was hanging over them.

An imposing array of screen names fortifies the cast of "Madame Spy," in support of Miss Wray and Asther, including such sterling players as Noah Beery, John Miljan, Edward Arnold, David Torrence, Roto Lloyd and Vince Barnett.

Largest Freshman Class in History Expected; New Dean Is Added.

ATHENS, Sept. 11. — Ohio university's one hundred and thirty-first year will open on the campus here next Monday morning when one of the largest freshman classes in recent years is expected to enroll. Pickaway-co. will probably show an increase in attendance.

An elaborate series of events has been arranged for the Freshman week program, and the entire student body will assemble in Alumni Memorial Auditorium Wednesday morning for the first convocation of the year. President Elmer Burrill Bryan will formally welcome the students at that time.

University officials have been busy during the past two months receiving and handling applications for admission. Applications have been unusually numerous during the past month, giving promise of an increased enrollment this fall.

ON WAITING LISTS

Rooms in university dormitories are full, leaving a heavy surplus on waiting lists. Several times as many applications have been received as can be cared for in the two co-operative homes provided this year for nearly 100 men.

Grounds and buildings have been conditioned for the return of students. Several major projects of repairing and repainting have been done during the summer.

Members of the University faculty who have been away for the summer engaged in teaching travel, study, and research have returned to their homes.

Colletta and Pal

Pretty 17-year-old Colletta Mulvihill, Pittsburgh, Pa., oil heiress, who sprang into fame by a week-end marriage and separation, discovered San Francisco's juvenile court authorities didn't approve her decision to postpone her voyage to Hawaii and pal around with wrestlers. Here is Colletta hovering near Hardy Kraus, former Ohio State university grinner, now a wrestler, several hours before authorities saw her aboard ship.

stitutional prohibition. As subsequent returns trickled in, this advantage was maintained.

Gov. Brann was confident that he would be re-elected and predicted that several of the larger cities, including his home town of Lewistown, would go Democratic by big majorities.

Republican leaders conceded the election of Governor Brann.

CITIES FOR BRANN

Brann and Ames ran neck and neck in most of the rural sections, but most of the urban centers appeared to be favoring the incumbent.

In Biddford, Gov. Brann polled a majority of nearly 5,000 while DuBois received a majority of 4,300 in the same city. Simon H. Hamlin of South Portland, Democrat, was predicted by non-partisan observers.

A victory for Congressman Edward C. Moran of Rockland over Judge Zelma M. Swinal of Camden, Republican, was predicted by non-partisan observers.

BY JAMES A. FARLEY
Chairman, Democratic National Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—"As Maine goes, so goes the nation." "I am content with the result of the election yesterday. The Democratic national organization dur-majority of 4,000 over Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Portland.

Incomplete returns from scattered sections this morning gave Brann 163,968 votes to 130,180 for Ames in the gubernatorial contest.

Former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Dexter, Republican, was believed to have the edge in the fight for the congressional seat from the second district now occupied by John G. Utterback, of Bangor, a Democrat, who defeated him two years ago.

A victory for Congressman Edward C. Moran of Rockland over Judge Zelma M. Swinal of Camden, Republican, was predicted by non-partisan observers.

BY JAMES A. FARLEY
Chairman, Democratic National Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—"As Maine goes, so goes the nation." "I am content with the result of the election yesterday. The Democratic national organization during this campaign was satisfied to leave the decision to the intelligence and loyalty of the voters of Maine. For that reason, no concerted effort was planned or carried out in the nature of a campaign, while the Republican national organization centered the fire there of its heaviest political artillery, all aimed at the Roosevelt administration policies. The heavy artillery, however, turned out to be pop guns—Colonel Knox, Col. Teddy Roosevelt, Senator Dickinson, Senator Hastings, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee and Congressman Rolton, chairman of the Republican congressional committee.

The convincing majority given to Governor Louis Brann, which should be ten times the plurality he registered in 1932, should be ample that the New Deal meets with the approval of the majority of the people of this country.

Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Keegan, of Wickliffe, O., were guests Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Foreman, S. Court-st.
